The banging that Ben heard was coming from a man stood over a charcoal fire. The man was hammering the hot, white iron into shape before it cooled. He was a blacksmith.

Though Ben wanted to go and have a look at what the man was doing, he decided not to. The sound of the hammering was very loud. Ben didn't like the sound. He started to whine.

The lady was stood near to Ben. She realised he didn't like the hammering sound. She went over to him. "It is OK," she said to Ben in a gentle voice. "That hammering is how we make our tools and weapons. They are all made from iron."

A young boy approaches Ben and the lady. He is talking to himself. Click on the speech bubble to hear what he is saying. Write down the words you hear.

The lady took the magic watch from the young boy. She stared at it. “What is this?” she asked. The lady was very puzzled. She had never seen anything like it before. Quickly, Ben jumped up and whisked it out of her hand.

Ben hoped the magic watch would take him back home. He had enjoyed his time in the Iron Age, however he longed to go back to the present day. He thought about his life with Kit and Sam, his house and all the things familiar to him. Would the magic watch work?
