After a very busy and fun morning doing topic work, it was lunchtime. Mrs Tan had told the class that the school cook had prepared a very special dinner to launch their topic: 'Aliens love to eat space rocks.'

“I hope we do not have to eat frozen dried food like astronauts do when they are in space,” said a worried Gabi.

“Gabi, I think you will all enjoy the food. Please remember to thank the cook because she has gone to lots of extra effort for you all,” replied Mrs Tan

When Kit, Sam and friends went into the school hall for lunch, they were amazed at the food. “Flying Saucers, Space Rocks and Rockets!” shrieked Kit in excitement.

“Martian Munchies for pudding!” shouted Sam.

“I think I am going to like this dinner!” said Gabi in delight.

The Cook's Notes

The Cook had made a list of all the food she wanted to include in today's special school dinner. In her notepad are some scribbled words. Read the words in her notepad.

School dinner was a success! Sam, Kit, Jake, Gabi and the rest of their class loved the special alien-themed food. They wished school dinners could always be as fun and tasty!

After dinnertime, Kit and Sam's class did some fun alien Maths and then some alien music. At home time, Mum was shocked when she greeted Kit and Sam from their classroom. Kit was still covered in blue splats of paint.

“Kit, what has happened to you? I know you were starting your alien topic today but I never thought you would actually turn into one!” gasped Mum. Then, Mum started to laugh.

“Sorry Mum!” replied Kit. “But it was the best day ever at school!”

“You can both tell me all about it on our walk home,” said Mum smiling.

In Phonics, Mrs Tan asked the class to read something. It looked very odd because the letters were all confused! Kit had a go and he could read them.

Kit and Sam enjoyed the space rock art. It was fun! They had to spray a stone with paint using a paintbrush. They had just started painting when Kit got paint everywhere!

Kit wished he had worn an apron. He was a mess! Thankfully, Mrs Tan was not cross. She tried to help and clean his top but the paint had stained it.

At playtime, Kit and Jake played aliens. Then, Kit and Sam listened to an alien story. Kit wished he was an alien because he would eat all of the treats he could!

After dinner, Kit and Sam did some alien Maths. They did some alien music, too. Then it was home time. Kit and Sam had the best day ever!

“Wow! What a busy day! This alien topic is going to be lots of fun!” said Mum.

“Tomorrow, Mrs Tan said we are going to read some more alien words in Phonics and then start to design an alien spacecraft,” said Sam, enthusiastically.

“When it is our class assembly in July, you and Dad will get to see all of our alien work” added Kit.

“Oh, we will look forward to that! Kit, please take your uniform off. You will need to have a bath,” laughed Mum.

Kit was scribbling something on a piece of paper. “O-d s-n-e-i-l-a e-v-a-h s-h-t-a-b?” asked Kit with a smile. Sam laughed but Mum looked puzzled!

Today, we have written
