Sam stood beside Jake for a photo. “Perfect! Thank you, your majesties!” said Mrs Tan.

Mrs Tan carried on taking photos of the class all dressed up.

After all of the dressing up, it was time to put the clothes and props away. The knight explained that there was one last thing to show everybody. Then, it would be time for the children to return back to school.

“As a very special treat for you all, we are going to head outside. We are going to watch some jousting,” explained the knight. “Thank you!” exclaimed Mrs Tan. “Boys and girls, what a wonderful way to end our fantastic day at Highfields Estate.”

Jousting

The children are all stood outside watching two knights jousting. Read the words as the horses go past.

The children loved watching the jousting. Sadly, it was only a brief introduction to jousting. It had started to rain quite heavily and so the show was over. The knight explained that they don't normally do jousting in February. They normally wait until the weather is better.

The children collected their lunch boxes, thanked the knight and made their way to the coach. On the journey home, Kit, Jake, Sam and Gabi chatted about the fabulous day they all had at Highfields Estate.

Highfields Estate

A 'Let's Read Together!' Book

It was a damp February morning and we were looking forward to our school trip! When we got off the coach, we could see the Highfields Estate across the field. It looked so big!

Kit had left his lunch box on the coach. It was a relief when the coach driver arrived with it. We saw a shiny statue standing beside the gate.

We went into a room called the solar room. There was a big, posh bed. It was so high that you needed steps to get to the top tier!

After visiting several other rooms in the Estate, it was lunch time. We were all hungry. Much to Kit's relief, no thief had been in and taken his lunch box!

Then we got to dress up in costumes. It was fun! King Sam thought she was the chief of Highfields Estate, Gabi loved holding a shield and Mrs Tan took a photo of us all.

We went outside and saw some jousting. Sadly, it started to rain so the show had to end. We were lucky to have seen some of the show because they don't normally do jousting in February.

As Kit, Sam, Jake and Gabi finished talking about their trip to the castle, the coach pulled up outside the school gates. “Don’t forget to bring all of your things off the coach,” called out Mrs Tan. “Kit, that includes you!” joked Sam with a giggle. Kit gave out a little laugh.

Today, we have read the
'Highfields Estate'
